++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy rain clearing to sunny spells and blustery showers.

Today:
A band of heavy rain, accompanied by gusty winds will sweep across the region during the morning. Brighter skies and scattered blustery showers for the afternoon. Winds easing briefly as the rain clears, but picking up again later. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Further showers, heavy at times, to come through the evening and overnight, these becoming more frequent with time. Remaining windy throughout the night. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Monday:
A bright and blustery day with sunny spells, but also plenty of showers, some of which will be heavy and perhaps thundery. Winds will ease down later in the afternoon. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Becoming drier through the midweek period, with more in the way of sunshine and fewer showers. Northerly winds will make it feel quite cold, with overnight frost returning.
